The path to Portuguese citizenship

Portugal now considers the waiting time during residency application processing when calculating the required legal residency period for nationality. The five year clock starts ticking from the point of application, not from the issuance date of the initial residency permit. This change brings relief to applicants affected by delays in processing.

Obtaining Permanent Residency: Step by Step

L

Consultation and signing a Service Agreement with Astons

1

Initial Consultation

Our advisers will evaluate your circumstances as well as your wants, needs, goals, and demands in the first consultation. We'll then help you select the most suitable program, explain the application process, and conduct a preliminary assessment gauging the likelihood of being approved for your chosen program.

Personal documents collection and preparation for investing

2

Document preparation

A detailed checklist will be provided, and you will be guided through the document collection stage. Experienced immigration advisers will prepare all the required documents along with the residence application and carry out a final check of each document for compliance to ensure all requirements.

Obtaining a unique tax identification number (NIF). It is required for opening a bank account in Portugal.

L

Applicant due diligence and obtaining approval of the application

3

Complete The Investment

Transfer the investment funds to the bank account in Portugal.

4

Submit Residency Application

The complete application, along with all supporting documents, will be submitted to the Portuguese Immigration Service (AIMA), the body that processes Golden Residence Permit applications, along with documentary evidence of the investment.

5

Book A Biometrics Appointment

The investor and their family must travel to Portugal to submit original documents and fingerprints for their residence permit cards.

6

Receiving approval for the residence permit and the issuance of residence permit cards.

The investor and their family members must spend at least 14 days every two years in Portugal to maintain residency. The residence permit has to be renewed every two years.
